Citizens Sound Off Over Animal Problem; Council Sets Work Session

by Bill Rowland

Uncontrolled animals wandering in old Greenbelt was one of the more contentious problems facing the new city council on October 4 during its first regular meeting. A close second in sharp exchanges and lack of easy answers was the question of safety for Green Ridge House seniors trying to walk across Ridge Road. Most of the remaining agenda was, by contrast, rather pedestrian.

Wild Beasts

Stephen Polaschik, closely followed by Eunice Coxon, fired the opening rounds in this latest salvo at council on the animal issue. Polaschik stated his concern that the new council should announce that night the date for a work session to consider animal control. He endorsed giving the city's police the authority to control animals.

Coxon told council that she had been "continuing my research on how other municipalities are doing — and they are doing a lot better than" Greenbelt. She has found that other cities in the area leave the licensing of animals to the county. She believes citizens would call the county with animal complaints more readily and less fearfully than is true with the city exercising control, because the county would be seen as impersonal and not subject to being influenced. Citing the county ordinance which requires confinement for 10 days of an animal that has bitten a human,

Coxon stated her belief that a county animal warden might have ruled differently on letting the dog which recently attacked and severely bit a postal carrier spend its confinement period in the residence of its owner.

Coxon concluded by asking council when its work session would be.

City Manager James Giese pointed out that the county animal control ordinances to which Coxon referred do apply within Greenbelt. He said that city staff frequently advised residents to contact the county with problems regarding neighbors' animals. Giese added that persons who do ask for county help must be prepared to identify themselves and to go on public record with their complaints.

Joseph Remenick took issue with various proposals made by the city's Community Relations Advisory Board in a September 8 report to council. CRAB proposed a limitation of no more than four animals to be kept by a resident. Remenick declared this number overgenerous, and "counterproductive." He felt that allowing as many as four would encourage owners with fewer than that number to achieve that limit.

Remenick also objected to ordinance language proposed by CRAB, "That no person should allow solid waste to remain on any . . . private property without the express consent previously obtained by the owner." Remenick contended that even with prior consent, such a practice would be unsanitary.

Coxon took aim at a CRAB recommendation for establishment in the city of an "Animal Control Board," saying, "I am opposed to the creation of any more committees."

Council was obviously ready to schedule an early discussion of the animal control topic, but immediately ran into difficulties. First, Mayor Pro Tem Richard Pilski called for a public hearing. Mayor Gil Weidenfeld and Councilmember Edward Putens disagreed with Pilski, saying that the earlier CRAB meeting with 35 residents in attendance had already provided the equivalent of a public hearing. Pilski grudgingly agreed to a council work session, but added that there will be a crowd attending the session.

Then council floundered around trying to find a meeting date on which all councilmembers and the city manager could be present, and eventually settled on October 24. To the tune of disgusted noises from the audience participants, who had hoped for action at the next regular council meeting on October 17, Weidenfeld spelled it out: That council was now look-

COUNCIL INAUGURATION TO BE REBROADCAST

The videotape of the inauguration of the newly elected Greenbelt City Council will be broadcast on Channel 10-A of the city cable television system at 3:30 p.m. and 7:30 p.m. on Tuesday, October 18.

For anyone interested in viewing the tape but who does not have cable television, a monitor will be set up for viewing in the City Council Chambers in the Municipal Building.

Storer Now Providing Cable Service to 1,000 Homes Here

by Luke Blanda

Though its cables have been ready since mid-July and Storer now has signed agreements with Greenbelt Homes, Inc., Windsor Green and Charlestowne Village, only 1,000 free-standing homes in Greenbelt enjoy the wider range of viewing choices cable offers.

The City Council invited Storer Cable Communications Vice President Winfield M. Kelly, Jr. (the former County Executive) and Charles Hookey, the company's Systems Manager, to its September 12 regular meeting to discuss the television firm's marketing plans and service-installation timetable for Greenbelt.

Kelly was unable to attend the meeting. But Hookey, who arrived late because of a prior appointment in northern Virginia that evening, told the council that the main obstacle blocking completion of Storer's operations is the need to negotiate separate agreements with the various housing developments in Greenbelt that his firm has met and continues to face.

When the city awarded Storer Greenbelt's cable television franchise, it also granted the company "right of way," that is, a sort of blanket permission to lay its cables across municipal property.

Moreover, no problem exists for private, free-standing homes. An individual home-owner can call Storer to subscribe, and the company can simply run its "access-wiring" from the cables in the street into the subscriber's living room.

But the need for negotiating arises in housing developments like GHI, Windsor Green and Greenbriar, for example, which are "multiple-dwelling units" and private property, Hookey said. A contract must first be signed with the property owners of each development before the access-wiring can be strung into any one unit.

These negotiations, Hookey said, plus additional "paperwork problems" are holding up the works.

Hookey did not have the information with him September 12, but later, on September 22, in an interview in his Hyattsville office, he outlined the status of Storer's progress in Greenbelt.

Greenbelt Agreements

Storer signed an agreement with GHI on June 1, 1983, he said. The cable firm has had signed agreements with Windsor Green and Charlestowne Village since mid-July.

Agreements with Greenbriar and with Glen Oaks, he said are pending.

Hookey added that Storer is now providing service to 1,000 private, free-standing homes in Greenbelt.

When asked how long it would take to begin offering service once agreements with the various developments in Greenbelt were signed, Hookey said the company's "internal goal" is six months.

Further, when asked, Hookey denied that the sales personnel and service crews are having a hard time handling both the company's county franchise and its franchise agreement with Greenbelt.

During the interview in his office, Hookey referred to the costs of installing a cable television network, which he said is a "huge construction project." One mile of cable system, he said, can cost between $20,000 and $30,000.

He added that Storer depends on PEPCO and C&P Telephone for co-operation in its venture. The two utility companies do all the "make-ready" work, preparing the utility poles for cable.

People who want the enjoyment of cable television in their homes, he said, often don't take these factors into account.

Storer Cable Communications was awarded its Greenbelt franchise on January 14, 1982. At the time the franchise was awarded, Storer said it would be ready within 18 months. But, as Hookey said in his appearance before the City Council, this year and a half time frame does not include the time needed to do access-wiring.

As part of the franchise agreement, the City receives five percent of Storer's Greenbelt profits. Over the past two quarters, the City has received about $1500 from Storer, according to city Administrative Assistant Michael McLaughlin. Another check should be coming in at the end of this month.

BARC Opens to Public

The Beltsville Agricultural Research Center (BARC) will be open to the public Saturday, October 15, from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. There will be demonstrations of agricultural technology, films and slide shows of research projects to view, sheep shearing, bus tours of the Center, and musical entertainment.

MURRAY LIABLE

City, Police Department and Chief Exonerated in Civil Rights Case

by Mary Lou Williamson

The City of Greenbelt, its police department and chief have been exonerated of federal civil rights and state tort charges brought by Greenbelt resident Peter Ladnier in federal court in Baltimore.

The decision handed down by the Fourth District Court on October 4 holds Greenbelt police officer Fred E. Murray liable, in his individual capacity, on a charge under federal civil rights law of unjustified force against Ladnier, and upholds the $65,000 damages judgment recommended by the jury. The four-day trial ended on July 25. "Peter feels vindicated" by the decision, his attorney, Arthur House of Rockville, told the News Review.

Murray was charged by Ladnier with responsibility for the August 14, 1981, pre-dawn collision in which the police car Murray was driving ran into the motorcycle Ladnier was riding. Further, Murray was charged by Ladnier with unnecessary use of force in restraining and handcuffing Ladnier after the accident. Defendants denied any wrongful acts, claiming that any injuries Ladnier received were a result of his own misconduct.

The official actions of city police at the time of the incident were covered by insurance from the Atlanta International Insurance Company which retained attorney William J. Kobokovich, Jr. of the Baltimore firm of Huber & Lutche to defend the city's police department, Chief William T. Lane and Murray. Home Insurance Company, holder of the city's general liability insurance, retained attorney John J. O'Neill, Jr. of Rockville to defend the city.

Defense Motion Filed

Both sides have 30 days from October 4 to appeal the decision. Neither side has made any decisions about appeals as yet, attorneys told the News Review. Ladnier's attorneys indicated they will be satisfied with the judgment if Ladnier is compensated.

A post-trial motion on Murray's behalf was filed with the court on Friday, October 7, Kobokovich told the News Review. The motion, in several parts, asks the judge (1) to reverse the decision against Murray, notwithstanding the jury's verdict, or (2) to set a new trial, or (3) to reduce the dollar award which the attorneys argue is excessive in light of the case.

The judge is expected to set a date for hearing the petition, though he could reject the requests in a written order.

The Decisions

At the end of the trial, held before Judge Joseph H. Young, the jury was presented with a special verdict form with as many as 17 questions to be answered. Based on those answers, the

Concern With Dog Attack

I was very concerned to read about the savage injuries which were inflicted by a vicious dog on Mail Carrier William Ellis. I hope Mr. Ellis will have a quick and full recovery.

What puzzles me in this case, though, is the fact that a proven dangerous animal is allowed to remain in quarantine in its Greenbelt home. If the dog got out of the house before, there is a possibility that it will break loose again before a determination is made whether it is diseased or not. It seems imperative that our animal control ordinance should be amended to insure that animals are put in quarantine in a facility other than the owner's home.

Postmaster Franklin Ford's suggestion about clustering mail boxes at entrances to courts shows a disregard for the welfare of Greenbelt citizens. We have many elderly or handicapped persons who look forward each day to receiving mail at the door and who would be hard-pressed to walk from a distant unit to the court entrance, especially during rainy or cold and snowy weather. Instead of planning additional hardships for people why doesn't Ford notify Greenbelt Homes, Incorporated and the City Manager about the 30 or 40 potentially dangerous dogs? Greenbelt Homes has the power to enforce its animal control regulations through the possible termination of a member's contract. Hopefully, the City will also tighten its ordinance and put more effort into rigid enforcement to protect Greenbelt's residents and visitors.

I hope the Greenbelt News Review will continue its efforts to help keep Greenbelt a community we can all enjoy.

Stephen Polaschik.

Federal Agency Opposes Highway to B-W Parkway

by Charles F. Schwan, Jr.

In commenting on the proposed Intercounty Connector, the National Capital Planning Commission (NCPC), the chief planning agency for the Federal Government in the metropolitan area, urged that the highway be terminated at I-95, not the Baltimore-Washington Parkway, as planned by the Maryland State Highway Administration. This is good news to those who wish to continue to keep trucks off the parkway.

The NCPC found that to build the highway to the parkway would be "inconsistent with the parks, open space and natural features" adjacent to the parkway that NCPC feels must be protected. Further, the Commission found that extending the road beyond I-95 would affect adversely traffic along Route 1 and highways that serve federal facilities located in Prince Georges County. #### V. MISCELLANEOUS

NOTE: This is a preliminary agenda - subject to change

ing toward having something on the statute books by the end of November — that is, decisions being made during one of the two regular meetings in November.

And then someone pointed out that representatives of "the other side" had not yet been heard from, and put the words "cats" and "leashes" into one sentence. Coxon thereupon fired the final shots in the evening's battle, by declaring, "I've never brought up the subject of cats" in relation to leash laws — "I've never been attacked by a vicious cat!"

The war is scheduled to resume at a work session of council on Monday, October 24.

Municipal Infractions

In separate action related (but not necessarily limited) to the animal control issue, council gave final approval to a charter amendment that will let the city impose fines for violation of city ordinances and regulations. In the past, most violations of city ordinances have been considered misdemeanors and had to be tried as criminal violations by the courts. State law now lets municipalities declare that certain violations of city ordinances and regulations are "municipal infractions," which are civil violations of the law.

The charter amendment will let council decide which violations are to be brought into the municipal infraction category and will let council set fines for infractions not to exceed $500.

Senior Pedestrians

Late in the long evening, another oral scuffle broke out when council reached an agenda item introduced by Weidenfeld. The item had to do with the pedestrian cross-walk on Ridge Road in front of Green Ridge House, and in particular the pushbutton-operated flashing yellow lights installed there last year by the city at the direction of council. As Weidenfeld explained the problem, some seniors living at Green Ridge House complained during a September Candidates' Night that the caution light is not effective in slowing down moving vehicles.

The councilmembers showed some initial inclination to disagree among themselves on the extent of the problem and its possible solutions. At one point, for example, Pilski suggested that the others must have been at a different Candidates' Night than the one he attended. But Giese quickly unified the councilmembers — against himself.

Giese had told council in his written comments on the agenda that the city has ordered an additional sign, expected to be mounted very soon, which will tell motorists they must yield to pedestrians in the cross-walk. Pilski, however, now declared that what is needed is a red light. Giese began listing his objections: Children will play with the pushbutton just to see the cars stop. "There's a lot more (complaining) than there is using of that light." Residents need to use caution; they need to push the button (which, said Giese, many do not), and they must expect that cars may not stop. "There's no way I can guarantee safety," concluded Giese.

To all of which Pilski declared that it is up to council, not the city manager, to decide the matter. "I want that red light," said Pilski, and so do the Green Ridge residents. Giese replied that if council wants the city to pay for a red light, the city will get the red light. But, added Giese, it cannot be just be a red light: It will have to meet state traffic-light requirements and provide the full green-yellow-red sequence.

At this point, former councilmember Robert Zugby entered the fray. First saying that he had sworn not to open his mouth during the evening, Zugby (who was defeated in the recent council election) then told council that "A flashing yellow light never told me to stop" at the Green Ridge crossing. He still believes the answer is a stop sign, which would stop everyone with no concern about unpushed buttons or electrical failures. Giese responded that traffic experts do not recommend stop signs at mid-block locations where motorists would not expect to find them. The stop sign in such a case would pose even greater danger for the pedestrian who assumes the car will stop. Weidenfeld said he prefers the red light.

Giese made one final attempt to persuade council that the present yellow flashing light plus the new sign is what is needed. But an annoyed Pilski shot back, "I'm not talking about a sign, I'm talking about people who are very insecure about crossing a street." If it is going to cost $1000 to make it safe, we should pay it, said Pilski.

Giese: "You can put in the light, but it isn't going to eliminate the complaints."

Pilski moved that city staff determine the cost and start moving toward installation of a red light. New councilmember Antoinette Bram amended the motion to include a buzzer that will let blind residents know the light is working. The motion passed unanimously.

Revenue Sources

Giese reported to council that County Executive Parris Glendening has expressed a willingness to credit the county's municipalities with about $6.5 million as compensation for duplicate services provided both by the county and the cities. Giese noted that this would equate to a reduction in the county property tax rate of perhaps 50 cents per $100 assessed valuation. However, he said, in gaining this credit from the county, the city would lose the present lesser cash rebate which the county now gives for duplicate services. To make up this difference, Greenbelt might have to increase the city's property tax rate by eight to nine cents. Giese said that county staff is working on proposed legislation, for consideration by county council that would accomplish this change. Giese told council he feels this is a "good faith" effort by Glendening. Weidenfeld said he sees this as the first equitable treatment of the municipalities by the county in many years.

In another matter, council decided on its request to the county for new Community Development Block Grants. The city is asking for money, in order of priority, for further reconstruction of Ridge Road (Westway to Crescent); reconstruction of Gardenway in its entirety; and renovation of North End School. Giese remarked that county staff felt last year that the city was "going beyond the realm of civility" in asking for North End funds. However, Weidenfeld urged that all three projects be included, even though he foresees that Greenbelt may be given no CDBG funds this year.

Legislation

More than a year ago, County Executive Glendening proposed modification of county zoning law to permit adaptive reuse of surplus school buildings as special exceptions to existing zoning. Although such special exceptions would require, in each case, super majority approval by county council, Greenbelt and other municipalities objected so strongly that Glendening's proposal (CB 113) was never introduced before county council.

CONSIDERING A CHANGE IN RESIDENCE?

There are three key elements to consider:

- A.) Your needs: things you positively have to have.
- B.) Your wants: things you'd like to have, but don't necessarily need.
- C.) Your qualifications:
  - 1) Your initial investment (cash to move in)
  - 2) Your total income (gross yearly income)
  - 3) Your debt service (total indebtedness)

I would like the opportunity to discuss with you how we can combine these three factors to assist you and your family in achieving your housing goals both within Greenbelt and the metropolitan area — of course with no obligation.

judge handed down the following written decisions in a "Memorandum Opinion and Order" on September 27:

1. "In favor of Murray and against plaintiff (Ladnier) on the negligence claim arising out of the motorcycle - police car collision." While the jury had recommended a $5,000 award to Ladnier, Judge Young points out that under common law in Maryland Ladnier's own negligence as a contributory factor to the accident "is an absolute bar" to any recovery by Ladnier.

2. "In favor of plaintiff (Ladnier) and against Murray in his individual capacity on the (federal civil rights) claim for unjustified use of force in the amount of $15,000 compensatory damages and $50,000 punitive damages."

In explaining the reasoning behind the second decision, the court made note of some inconsistencies in the jury's answers to certain of the questions in the special verdict. The jury found that Murray applied physical force to Ladnier that "was so disproportionate to the need presented as to be shocking to the conscience and that caused injuries" to Ladnier. However, the jury also determined that Murray did not "commit a battery" on Ladnier and that "Murray's use of force or threatened use of force was not inspired by an evil purpose or malicious intent."

Judge Young, in a six-page discussion, writes that "application of the governing law to these findings requires an entry of judgment in favor of (Ladnier) and against Murray in his individual capacity on the (federal law) claim of unjustified use of force." The key issues here are "immunity" and "malice." Immunity for police officers is generally broad and protect police officers and police departments against such judgments unless malice is shown. Murray claimed immunity based on the jury's finding that he did not act with an evil purpose. Federal and State laws differ, as do their definitions of concepts such as "malice." On this federal civil rights charge, Judge Young argues that the jury's finding that Murray did not show malice would immunize him "only if he did not know or should not have reasonably known that his actions violated the constitutional rights of others." Judge Young writes that "implicit in the jury's finding that Murray's use of force was shocking to the conscience is the further finding that Murray knew or at least should have known that his actions violated the constitutional rights of (Ladnier)."

Judge Young makes the further point that while "actual malice" (requiring evil purpose) is not proved, "legal malice" (showing recklessness or indifference) is proved. The fact that the jury assessed punitive damages against Murray after being instructed "they could do so only if they found that Murray acted with reckless disregard or indifference to plaintiff's rights reveals that the jury found that Murray acted with legal malice."

Judge Young goes beyond the issues raised in defense of Murray to deal with three other arguments the judge felt attorneys "might have made but did not," and rejects all of them. "In conclusion," writes the judge, "the jury's finding that Murray used physical force so disproportionate to the need presented as to be shocking to the conscience is sufficient to hold Murray liable (under federal civil rights law) in his individual capacity."

3. "In favor of the City of Greenbelt, Lane in his official capacity and Murray in his official capacity on the (federal law) claims for reckless or indifferent training of Murray." On this charge, the jury's answers provided a clear guide for the court. The City of Greenbelt, the jury had said, was not reckless or indifferent in its training, supervision and control of Murray. Even though the jury had found that Chief Lane was reckless or indifferent in his training, supervision and control of Murray, they did not find that this contributed to Ladnier's injuries. Murray, writes Judge Young, "can only be held liable in his official capacity if there was some basis for holding the City of Greenbelt liable."

4. "In favor of Murray and against plaintiff on the (state law) assault and battery claims." The decision of the court in Murray's favor is based on the concept of immunity. Under state law, "actual malice," which Judge Young writes is needed to defeat immunity, was not proved.

Legal Fees Provided

As the prevailing party, Ladnier was awarded $6,605 in legal fees for his attorney Arthur G. House, Hadley & House, Rockville.

Last week was a rough one for our Greenbelt teams. Not one team won a game, but Greenbelt II (6 year olds) managed to score one goal against Beltsville (by Stevie Klem) in a 2-1 loss. The 11-year old county team lost 3-2 to first place South Bowie with John Stringfellow and Adrian Tapley scoring goals.

Jaime Brignoli scored Greenbelt's one goal in its 2-1 loss to Lanham I. Greenbelt II experienced its first victory against Cheverly, 4-0. Stevie Klem scored a "hat-trick." Daniel Gomez scored the other goal. The 8-year old team also won 2-1, with Faren Fagen and Mike Kramer scoring for Greenbelt.

The 10-year old county team played excellently against tough Oxon Hill but lost 1-0. The 11-year old county team lost a heart-breaker against Cheverly 3-2, with Jonathan Schacter scoring both goals, one a penalty shot, the other assisted by Adrian Tapley. That was one exciting game! Jimmy Barron scored on a penalty kick when the 12-year old team played Fort Washington, but still lost 5-1. Our 13-year old team won 2-1 against Cheverly, with Matt Webb and James Jordan scoring goals.
